MILES OPPOSES NEW ARMY PLAN

Says Continental System Is Dangerous Concentration of Military Power.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired, addressing the house military affairs committee today, denounced the continental army plan adopted by the administration.

"It would be a very dangerous step toward centralization that would put a tremendous power in the hands of some future president," he said. "It is anti-American. Why try to Germanize our army?"

Gen. Miles praised the national guard, declared compulsory military service unnecessary, favored three-year enlistments, recommended a regular standing army of 100,000 or 120,000 men, and submitted an army reorganization plan of his own, contemplating recruiting a force of 1,200,000 men by expanding the units of organization.

He said the national guard should be organized the same way. He said it would be necessary to raise 2,000,000 men, easily possible in a reasonably short time.

Gen. Miles said the United States was daily manufacturing more war material than any two nations abroad are using in the same time and that the experience in the barbed wire shows that guns and armor ships are no match for fortifications and submarine.

"Overseas expeditions," he said, "always have been very expensive and a rule disaster. To cross the Atlantic or Pacific oceans to land in the United States would be a very serious undertaking."

An enemy, he said, might be able to put a force of 50,000 men on its ships, but would never be able to land that number on United States shores.
